The Grand Canyon is ever-changing, with massive walls that step back to expose eons of natural history, at one place dark and narrow, and at another lush with waterfalls thundering hundreds of feet.

Daily side hikes lead you to sparkling streams, pristine pools, green fern glens and ancient Anasazi ruins. The Western River J-Rig

Since you'll be rafting down the Grand Canyon for nearly 200 miles, the raft you will be riding becomes an integral part of your experience in terms of relaxation, whitewater and ability to move about. While you'll certainly be getting on and off the raft quite a bit every day, your comfort on the raft is important. Western River Expeditions uses a patented raft called the "J-Rig." This raft offers one of the most comfortable rides on a Grand Canyon whitewater rafting trip. You'll find plenty of space to stretch out and relax in the calm sections of the river and one of the most exciting rides in the whitewater stretches. With plenty of seat positions to choose from, you can decide whether you'll ride up front for more action or further back for a calmer experience. People are free to try different seating locations throughout each day of the trip.
